“ I had the same job as Skip at another Goodyear plant in Ohio and first met him at a training conference in Akron in the 80's. He was well liked by everyone and was always hard working and helpful to the other managers. He shared his knowledge, and was a favorite because of his kindness and he also had a way of being funny without really trying to be funny. One day in a training class we were two hours into the class when he finally realized he was in the wrong book. He got teased all week because of that but we all had fun with it. I visited him in Jackson and we had dinner at a very old restaurant in town that I still remember to this day. It was a pleasant evening. He was a good person and everyone in the General Products training division knew and respected "Skip". I am sorry for your loss
