“ I miss you, Momma, more and more every day. Everyone else seems to be getting along okay, handling your passing in their own way. You know me, I tend to hang on a bit tighter. I have pictures of you all over the house, nick nacks and one of your crosses too. They help me remember you and our bond. I'm hurtin', Momma. Bad. I'll make it though. I know you aren't in anymore pain and I believe in my heart you are in the loving arms of the Lord. You're up there with Grandma and Ryan and even my dear Stacey. You now have a perfect love that we read about. Don't forget, though, that I love you too. We all do. I just have to wait a bit before I see you again, but I surely believe I will. Until then, I love you, Momma. Keep the coffee hot!

Thank you, ma'am. Mom liked the folks at Genesis very much. You're right, she was a sweet lady. She was my best friend and it's been a rough year. I know she's now in the hands of our Lord and Savior. Also, she reunited with my grandmother and my baby brother, experiencing a love that we can't even comprehend! I miss them so much and look forward to the day I can hug all of them again.
