“ Why isn't there a viewing or burial yet?

*I am his wife Penny, for a 2 hour viewing and then cremation its its a good size down payment before the funeral home will do anything and unfortunately we did not have any preperations for his sudden passing. We have focused on me fighting cancer the last year in a half and fully expected i would pass before him. Still he had always told me that his family of several siblings would no or do what ever was needed. The first meeting was a whatever i wanted or Herb had, the next day a bus load had decided what it was going to be. Cremation and nothing more. 12 years we were married and he raised my kids with me and he deserved more than a check and maybe a life celebration crap thst will never happen. It was the most humiliated i have ever been for both herb and myself. And from the first visit i was able to see him at mayhew older man who worked ei
With us was just as rude and was not clear on things, very negative and demeaning towards me and being unable to talk there was no consideration or patience . I left sad,sick, shocked, disbelief, and still d9 plus some.*

“ Our wedding day, June 6, 2009. Absolutely 100 percent our way, our day from beginning to end. Warm beautiful day outside where he made a simple wooden arch where we stood and said our vows , friends, family, and our kids . Beans over outside fire, Herb stayed up most the night before frying potatoes and baking corn bread . Friends made small round his and her cakes and guys n gals flower that wasnt two the same but perfectly us. I couldnt say id ever had tears of joy that just would not stop as i walked out to meatloafs "Are You Gonna Love Me Forever". That day has ran through my heart and head and again i cant stop the tears from pouring but this time its because my hearts being tore out in peices. Hold onto them until i get there babe, im trying to except it and let you go but hard to do when my hearts already in your hands. Xoxoxo
