“ Today the world lost a truly great man. He wasn't known for his riches or his fame, but he was known as a husband, dad, grandfather, uncle, brother, son, and a friend. To me, he fell into that last category, a friend. A friend of 30 years that was there for me and my family through thick and thin. He was a man of wisdom and a child of God, one of the sweetest, kindest, most humble men I've ever met. He is now gone from this life and in the Lord's presence. He has received his reward that I heard him talk about so many times. He used to always sing a song about being so homesick for heaven. Today he's no longer homesick for that place, but is rejoicing with his parents, brother, and most of all Jesus! What a legacy he left behind and an example to others of how to be a friend and a brother in Christ. Although my heart is broken, we will meet again. I will forever love and miss you my friend!

“ I do not ever remember not knowing brother Leroy and loving to hear him sing and feeling the anointing of God flowing from him through his song. He is the one person my children can remember singing, and the songs he sang when they were small just as I do. He was a wonderful man of God with a meek and humble spirit yet strong and mighty in power. To all of those he inspired, encouraged and supported, which also included members of God's family, my family, and his family that I love dearly, his loss will be greatly felt. To heaven, his presence has been joyfully and wonderfully welcomed. My deepest condolences and prayers go out to his wife, Pamela, his children, grand children, siblings, and to each of his other family members and dearest friends. One day, we will hear Leroy singing and playing beautiful music again as he welcomes each of us that enters through heaven's gate.
